

SHOT IN QUARREL ABOUT A WOMAN

Wounded Man Walks the Street Until Stopped by Policeman.

INSISTS HE HAD FALLEN.

Woman in Saloon When Shooting Occurred Is Arrested, but Assailant Escapes.

With blood flowing from a wound in his forehead a man came down Third avenue early to-day and at Fifteenth street a policeman stopped him.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the policeman.

"I fell and hurt my head," replied the man.

"You seem to be badly hurt. You come with me," the policeman insisted.

Reluctantly the man accompanied the policeman to the East Twenty-second street station, and there it was seen that he had a deep wound in his forehead.

"What did you fall on?" he was questioned.

"On a sharp gravel stone."

The man then gave his name as Edward Taylor, of No. 146 East Fifteenth street. He was taken to Bellevue Hospital in an ambulance, and the physicians in probing the wound found a revolver bullet lodged between the flesh and the skull.

"I must have fallen on that bullet," insisted Taylor.

The police learned that Taylor had been in the Brunswick saloon, a resaurant at No. 143 Third avenue. He entered the place last night with a woman and was with her drinking in the rear room when an unidentified man came in and a quarrel between him and Taylor followed. Then there came a fight, and the police say that the man drew a revolver and shot Taylor between the eyes.

The woman disappeared while the fight was in progress. Immediately after the shooting the man with the revolver ran to the street and disappeared. Taylor pressed his handkerchief to his bleeding head and went to the street. He walked down Third avenue until the policeman picked him up.

Taylor's refusal to tell about the fight or where it took place is believed to be prompted by a desire to keep the woman's name secret.

The woman alleged to have been with Taylor was arrested later by Policeman Cram, of the East Twenty-second street station. She said she was Agnes Little, aged twenty-six, married, living at No.
1618 Third avenue. She admitted she was in the saloon when the shooting took place, and added that she knew Taylor's assailant by sight, but said she did not know his name.

Augustus Nabor, a waiter at the Brunswick, was also arrested. He and the woman are held, charged with being suspicious persons. The surgeons at Bellevue Hospital say Taylor will recover.

HUNTED MAN ON 3-MILE COURSE

Woman Insulted Captured, Buried Under Leaves, After Long Chase.

There was an exciting man chase in Bloomfield, N. J., led by Policeman John R. Bayliss, Wright L. Gilbert and a number of other citizens. Mr. Gilbert, a business man, of Manhattan, who was in the van, captured the man, who said he is Charles Paris, of No. 48 Cone street, Orange. There were two other young men with Paris, but they got away.

The three had been hanging around Oakes's wooden mill several hours annoying the girls employed there and misbehaving themselves in other ways.

James Bayliss went out to remonstrate with them, when all three jumped on him and beat him into unconsciousness.

The mill hands were in a state of terror, and word was telephoned to Policeman Bayliss, who lives a short distance away, and he went to the mill.

At sight of the bluecoat the three started on a run in the direction of Belleville. Up hill and down dale went pursued and pursuers. In a wood in the rear of the home of Ward Stafford the three men separated and went in different directions.

Bayliss decided to keep after the one who continued on toward Belleville.
The man ran like a deer, but Bayliss, who is the fastest runner on the local police force, rapidly gained on him.

At Smith and Belleville avenues Bayliss was joined in the chase by Wright L. Gilbert and others, and then the man, who had taken to the highway at Orchard street, again took to the fields.
He leaped over rail fences with the cleverness of a hurdle jumper, while Gilbert, who was fresher than Bayliss, followed suit. The chase continued for over three miles, and Gilbert saw the man enter a clump of bushes near the home of Charles Grieshaber and then disappear.

Gilbert approached the spot and found the fellow trying to bury himself in the leaves. He was completely exhausted by his long run and offered no resistance.

His clothing was almost torn from his body where it had come in contact with the briar bushes, and his hands and face were scratched and bleeding.

Bayliss handcuffed his prisoner and after procuring a conveyance took Paris to the police station, where he was locked up.

CUPID TRAP FOR $30,000 FAILED

Man, Wife and Friend Are Held for Conspiring to Blackmail.

(Special to The Evening World.)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 10.—Instead of getting $30,000 "bush money" from their employer, Emil Klein-smith, a real estate operator, Mr. and Mrs. Casper Bein and their mutual friend, Ludwig Nicholas, are under arrest for conspiracy to commit blackmail, held in $5,000 bail each for a further hearing.

Bein was employed by Mr. Klein-smith as a coachman, and his wife as housekeeper. Several weeks ago Bein and Nicholas called on a private detective and informed him that Mr.
Klein-smith was alienating the affections of Mrs. Bein.

They professed to have information to show that the real estate operator was meeting his housekeeper in town and conferring upon her attentions to which the husband had every reason to object.

A watch was put on the house, but no evidence was found. Then Bein and Nicholas came to the detective again with another story of clandestine meetings. A warrant was sworn out for the arrest of Mr. Klein-smith, but the detective discovered that Mrs.

Bein and Nicholas were making love to each other, and that two husband knew about it.

He consulted with Mr. Klein-smith and arrested Bein and Nicholas with Mrs. Bein.
